Tucked away at the back of the Chamber of Commerce, past the Big Grits and the weekly dog races, is a small bar with a wider choice of drinks and snacks than your average bar. I mean, it's not like you can't get decent bar food at The Big Grits, but they don't really have any after 5:30. At The Alley Cat, they just have appetizers, and they're pretty good, so you can carry on anyway. When I go to The Alley Cat, I tend to bring friends. I think they might be an invite-only place to hang out, like the Lindy Hop or the Nitecaps, but they're good for meeting people and having a drink. And since they go big on drinks, I tend to bring friends who can drink a lot. When I go, I usually go around 5:30 because I feel like everyone else does when they're drinking. I like to go to the back and hang out by the bar, because I'm always a nervous sipper, and that back patio area is large and allows a lot of people to just not sit on top of each other. I've never seen a large number of people at The Alley Cat because of the wide patio, but I know that when it's super-packed you can get pretty close to the dance floor. People seem to be in the holiday spirit this year, so I'm sure that adds to the festivities. I'll leave it to the group to choose what they're going to get, but here's what's on the menu: THE WHOLE TIN OF OYSTERS: For 3.95, you get 1 can of oysters, a few pickled jalapenos, some cocktail sauce and a side of chips. Some of the oysters are Rockefeller, a few are '50s, and a few are Belons. If 3da54e8ca3
