Early results and medium term clinical outcome in patients with moyamoya disease. The purpose of the current study is to investigate the early results and the medium term clinical outcome in patients with moyamoya disease (MMD). Patients with MMD who underwent treatment for aneurysmal subarachnoid hemorrhage or ischemic stroke were studied retrospectively. Using a questionnaire, we assessed the results of treatment. We obtained clinical follow-up data from the patients' families or physicians. Thirty-four patients (23 men, 11 women; mean age, 37.3 +/- 20.1 years) with MMD were included in this study. At the time of follow-up, the mean duration of MMD was 12.3 +/- 7.3 years. Thirty-four patients (97%) had a history of cerebrovascular events prior to treatment. Six patients had symptoms of stroke before admission to our hospital (17%). Twelve patients (35%) had undergone carotid endarterectomy and 4 patients (12%) had received intravenous thrombolysis before
